

List of Prices for Communication Optical Cables

AI Overview

Optical cable prices vary widely, from $0.13 per foot for simple FTTH drop cables to $6 per foot or more for high-count backbone cables, depending on fiber type, strand count, and construction.

Typical Pricing by Fiber Type and Count

- Single-mode fiber (SMF): $0.10 to $0.50 per foot for standard cables; OS1 for indoor use, OS2 for outdoor long-distance applications.
- Multimode fiber (MMF): $0.30 to $1.00 per foot; OM1-OM4 types are used for shorter distances and in-building networks.
- High-count cables: A 12-strand cable costs around $0.50 per foot, while a 24-strand cable can reach $1.00 per foot. Large backbone cables, such as 288-strand, may cost $6 per foot or more.

Pricing by Cable Construction and Rating

- Indoor riser-rated cables (OFNR): Lower cost, suitable for vertical installations between floors.
- Plenum-rated cables (OFNP): Higher cost due to fire safety compliance for air-handling spaces.
- Armored or outdoor cables: $0.50 to $5 per foot, designed for harsh environments or direct burial.

Pre-Terminated Assemblies and Patch Cables

Factory-terminated cables with connectors are more expensive than raw cable, with prices varying by connector type and fiber strand count. These assemblies are convenient for rapid deployment in data centers and network backbones.

Factors Affecting Pricing

- Fiber type: Single-mode fibers are generally more expensive than multimode fibers due to long-distance performance.
- Strand count: More strands increase cost proportionally.
- Cable length: Longer cables increase total cost linearly.
- Protective sheathing: Outdoor or armored cables cost more due to additional protection.
- Installation requirements: Specialized connectors, termination hardware, and labor can add to overall expenses.

Market Considerations

Prices fluctuate based on raw material availability, technological advancements, and demand from data centers and telecom networks. Optical cable...
