

Ranking of Saudi Arabian Optical Fiber Cables

AI Overview

The top fiber optic cable manufacturers in Saudi Arabia are Middle East Fiber Cable (MEFC), Riyadh Cables Group, and Bahra Electric, recognized for their technical expertise, certifications, and capacity to support large-scale projects.

Top Manufacturers

Middle East Fiber Cable Manufacturing Co. (MEFC) MEFC is a Saudi-Japanese partnership based in Riyadh, founded in 1995, specializing exclusively in fiber optic cables. They are highly regarded for technical precision, low attenuation, and high reliability, using premium fiber cores from global leaders like Corning and Fujikura. MEFC is certified by Saudi Aramco and STC, making them ideal for government tenders and projects requiring high local content (IKTVA). They excel in customized solutions, including tactical military cables and ADSS for power lines, and are a preferred choice for mega-projects like NEOM.

Riyadh Cables Group Established in 1984, Riyadh Cables is one of the largest cable manufacturers in the Middle East, with a strong presence in Saudi Arabia, UAE, and Iraq. Their fiber optic division supports massive infrastructure projects, including OPGW and hybrid cables for 5G base stations. They hold all major certifications and approvals, including Aramco approvals for hazardous environments, and have the production capacity to handle national backbone networks. Riyadh Cables is also a publicly listed company, emphasizing innovation, quality, and sustainability.

Bahra Electric Founded in 2008, Bahra Electric is part of the CPC group and focuses on modern, automated fiber optic cable production. They manufacture dry-core optical cables, which are faster and cleaner to install than traditional gel-filled cables. Their vertical integration allows control over PVC and conduit production, ensuring consistent quality and supply chain efficiency. Bahra Electric is a key supplier for expansion projects in Makkah a...
